

PLO in crisis after Syria ousts Arafat

By DAVID BERNSTEIN
Post Middle East Affairs Reporter and agencies

Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat was expelled from Syria on Friday. His expulsion plunged the organization into its most severe crisis since several field officers in Arafat's dominant Fatah group challenged his leadership early last month.

The expulsion, which followed Arafat's persistent claim that Syria was aiding the rebel officers, has left him completely cut off from his forces both in the northern Lebanese port of Tripoli and the eastern Bekaa Valley, both areas controlled by the Syrians.

But Arafat's most loyal aide, Khalil Wazir (Abu Jihad) was still in Lebanon yesterday. According to agency reports from Beirut he toured loyalist positions in the Bekaa and Tripoli areas, apparently preparing loyalist forces for a possible confrontation with Syrian and rebel forces. Tension in both areas was reported to be running high.

Arafat flew from Damascus to Tunis. He told newsmen on arrival that his expulsion from the Syrian capital was "part of a Syrian-Libyan plot against the Palestinian revolution."

He said that the methods Syria had used reminded him of those used by the Beirut authorities when he was ordered to leave Beirut last summer, and expressed concern that his forces in the Bekaa, surrounded by the Syrians, could become "the victims of a new carnage."

The embattled PLO leader flew to Prague last night to address an international peace assembly attended by more than 6,000 delegates from 140 countries — a reminder that while he might appear to have lost control of the PLO's armed struggle, he still remains a political force on the international scene.

There was speculation in both Beirut and Damascus last night that Arafat's next step would probably be yet another tour of the Arab world, probably in a bid to drum up support for an Arab summit to help resolve the crisis in the PLO.

Despite confident assurances by Wazir yesterday that Arafat would soon be back in Lebanon to lead his men, the chances of his returning appear slight unless Syria can be induced to change its position.

Syria, while plainly in sympathy with the rebel officers, had been at pains to keep a fairly low profile in the dispute and, despite some reports to the contrary, refrained

Cabinet to set arbitration terms, striking MDs want preconditions

By MARGERY GREENFELD
and AVI TEMKIN
Jerusalem Post Reporters

The fate of the country's staggering medical service and, possibly, of Finance Minister Yoram Aridor, hinges on today's cabinet meeting, in which the government will propose conditions for agreed arbitration with the striking doctors.

Yet another deadlock in the 117-day crisis was reached last night as the Israel Medical Association last night rejected the government's offer to go to arbitration with no preconditions. The IMA demanded that the arbitrator deal only with those items upon which no agreement has been reached during the intensive negotiations held since Tuesday — shortening the doctors' work week to 36 hours and the rate of payment for standby and night duty shifts.

The IMA insisted last night that other topics already agreed upon, either in the recent talks or in previous wage agreements, be included in the starting conditions and not be dealt with by the arbitrators.

The Treasury, however, wants all items open for discussion, including previous wage agreements and the doctors' current demands.

The government's announcement on Friday afternoon that the matter would be turned over to an arbitrator, followed the IMA's demand for an additional 15 per cent to be tacked onto the figure proposed to them on Thursday night.

Health Minister Eliezer Shostak was aghast at the doctors' demand on Friday morning and rejected it out of hand. Shostak then asked Prime Minister Menachem Begin to convene a special cabinet session to proclaim a state of emergency.

Attorney-General Yitzhak Zamir declared that there are no laws covering such a situation, which would enable the government to take the step.

Begin then began intensive consultations with Aridor, who finally agreed to arbitration — the step he has opposed since the beginning of the strike on March 2.

However, Aridor persuaded Begin that the many distortions and inconsistencies in the doctors' pay scale and working conditions must be set aside, and the complete package negotiated from scratch — disregarding draft agreements reached during the four months of long dispute.

Wrangle expected on terms

By ASHER WALLFISH
Post Knesset Correspondent

After the cabinet decides today what terms of reference to propose for arbitration of the doctors' strike, Attorney-General Yitzhak Zamir is expected to negotiate at length with the doctors on an agreed agenda. The names of the arbitrator or arbitrators are not expected to constitute a major problem.

On Friday afternoon Zamir phoned the legal adviser of the Israel Medical Association and asked him to obtain from the strike leaders a formulated stand with regard to the arbitration proposal. Following today's cabinet meeting Zamir said that the doctors' counsel, representatives of the government and of the association should meet to draft the agreed terms of reference and define the nature of the arbitration and its powers.

Although Israel for more than 10 years has had a medical tribunal, the government will apparently not insist that the dispute go to the Ben-Zion tribunal if the doctors are reluctant, as association sources have already said unofficially.

(The government and the Histadrut set up the institution, but it operates according to its own rules.)

Under the Arbitration Law, arbitration can be performed by a single person or by each party to the dispute naming a representative and the two representatives so named agreeing between them to name a third person.

Although Prime Minister Menachem Begin took due note of demands on Friday by the National Religious Party and the Agudat Yisrael to break the deadlock over the weekend, it is not believed that the two religious parties' pressure was what turned the tide.

The Aguda demanded a Saturday night extraordinary Knesset session. Two NRP figures, Education Minister Ze'evulun Hammer and Deputy Foreign Minister Yehuda Ben-Meir, threatened to bolt the Interior Minister Yosef Burg without whom the threat was hollow in great part.

Hammer has called a meeting of the NRP's Knesset faction for 8 a.m. today to decide on the party's stand regarding the arbitration dispute. The party has not removed its threat to cause a cabinet crisis if the doctors strike is not ended quickly.

The Labour call from Alignment faction chairman Moshe Shaleh for a special Knesset session, which was apparently not answered by Speaker Menachem Savidor, should probably also be seen as tangential to the main considerations of the prime minister, who was apparently influenced mostly by Health Minister Eliezer Shostak.

The cabinet today is expected to call on the doctors to halt their strike entirely once the principle of arbitration has been agreed upon. However, since the doctors are unlikely to stop the strike until the terms of reference of the arbitration entity have been settled to everyone's satisfaction, some cabinet sources expect the cabinet to be called into session more than once. "It is not a meeting with the doctors which is necessary," contacts with the doctors show that the terms of reference approved today are unworkable because the doctors will have none of it.

Labib to discuss

38-year-old Italian machine soon will be the Prime Minister's "awled tospit," and is like he was unconscious a message from the Garden. Ronald Reagan is itself a Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defence Minister Moshe Arens on America's continuing efforts to move Syria from its stand on the Israel-Lebanon agreement and the withdrawal of forces from Lebanon.

Political sources in Jerusalem believe Habib's main objective is to postpone a decision on a new deployment of IDF forces in Lebanon until the Begin-Reagan meeting in Washington at the end of July.

Deputy Secretary of State Richard Fairbanks and special ambassador Morris Draper are accompanying Habib on the trip here. While Habib will focus on talks between Jerusalem and Beirut, Fairbanks will make another attempt to meet with Syrian leaders in Damascus. Fairbanks was sent to the area following Syria's refusal to meet Habib.

Political sources said last night they do not think that Habib has designed to make it easier for Begin to postpone a decision on IDF redeployment in Lebanon until the Reagan meeting.

Habib wants to gain a clear idea of the various Israeli alternatives for redeployment and to learn the Lebanese view.

Political sources said that Habib's talks should be seen as a preparation for the Reagan meeting.

Observers emphasized that despite the noticeable improvement in bilateral relations between Israel and the U.S., the administration has not changed its position on certain issues. They mentioned Secretary of State George Shultz's statement last Thursday which clearly indicates that the White House has not changed its position on settlements. The U.S. also continues to see the Palestinian problem as the core of the Middle East crisis.

The observers maintained that the U.S. might start talks with the Syrians which could include the future of the Golan Heights and, because of fears of PLO radicalization, the U.S. may make an effort to contact the more moderate faction of the PLO.

Situation in hospitals termed 'catastrophe'

Jerusalem Post Staff

The situation in the country's hospitals worsened over the past two days as more of the hunger-striking doctors collapsed and had to be taken to hospital. Israel Defence Forces doctors on reserve duty and those normally stationed there are virtually running Rambam Hospital in Haifa, which is closed to new civilian admissions. The uniformed doctors are treating both IDF wounded and those civilians remaining in nearly empty hospitals.

Several doctors in uniform are being treated in military hospitals. Modan met with doctors and hospital management officials, who told him that the situation is critical

U.S. court ruling may hit Israel lobby

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — The Supreme Court's decision striking down legislative vetoes of presidential decisions is expected to make it more difficult for Israel's congressional supporters to block arms sales to Arab states. (Related story Page 4).

This was the consensus among congressional observers and among U.S. sources following the court's 7 to 2 decision on Thursday.

Over the past 50 years, Congress has passed many laws extending authority to the president, or the executive branch of the government. But in the process, Congress has often attached language enabling it to veto presidential actions by passing resolutions in the House of Representatives or Senate.

The court has now ruled that procedure unconstitutional. Chief Justice Warren Burger wrote that the concept of the legislative veto clashes directly with the constitution's allocation of powers among the branches of government.

In the early 1970s, Congress passed the Arms Export Control Act which allowed the president to sell weapons abroad but enabled Congress to block those sales.

This legislation was used to try to veto the 1978 F-15 package sale to Saudi Arabia and the 1981 AWACS sale to Saudi Arabia. Both efforts were unsuccessful.

But the law has often made a president more cautious in pushing for controversial arms sales. President Ronald Reagan has withheld selling F-16 fighters and mobile Hawk missiles to Jordan, fearing a major battle with Congress. But with the law being ruled unconstitutional, the president may in the short run have more leeway in concluding such sales.

U.S. study says Israel to seek more aid

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — The U.S. government's General Accounting Office has released a 93-page report on American economic and military assistance programmes to Israel, concluding that Israel is likely to increase its requests in the coming years because of a growing inability to repay its debts.

The detailed report was prepared over several months by congressional auditors and other investigators. An unclassified version was made public on Friday.

It noted that various factors affecting Israel's balance of payments "could alter Israel's ability to pay its debt" in the future — a conclusion disputed by the State Department and the government's Agency for International Development (AID). "State reported that they do not foresee the development of a severe debt situation," the report said. "AID stated that there is cause for optimism about Israel's balance of payment prospects."

The GAO report did not make any specific recommendations but expressed concern in several areas involving the ongoing U.S. aid programme to Israel. For example, it warned that the many programmes involving preferential treatment for Israel could set precedents for other U.S. aid recipients, thereby weakening the U.S. economy.

Another area of concern cited in the report was in the area of Israel's military exports — some of which are partially funded by U.S. financial assistance. These exports, including fighter aircraft, could "have an adverse impact on the U.S. economy and can affect U.S. ability to control proliferation of these technologies."

The report noted that Israeli military debt repayment of previous loans will rise from a projected $906 million in 1984 to about $1.1 billion in 1992.

"GAO believes the trends toward increasing assistance requirements, greater relaxation of restrictions on the use of FMS (foreign military sales) funds, competition with U.S. production, and setting of precedents that others may seek to emulate will continue as long as Israel feels militarily threatened by its neighbours in the region. It is clear that the ultimate solution to Israel's security depends upon a negotiated settlement with its Arab neighbours."

Israel, the report said, is currently the largest U.S. aid recipient with Egypt a close second.

Israel Bank deputy downgraded

Post Economic Reporter

Bank of Israel governor Moshe Mandelbaum has fired his deputy Yakir Plessner from his post in charge of the bank's prestigious research department.

Relations between the two have been strained almost from the beginning, when Plessner was installed as deputy. Plessner is known as one of the main advisers to Finance Minister Yoram Aridor. His nomination was interpreted both inside and outside the bank as a sign of Aridor's desire to control its activities.

Economic observers pointed out that Mandelbaum's action means that his deputy will have no defined function in the bank, and his post may be converted into a token position.

The observers also pointed out that Mandelbaum's action could only be taken because Aridor's position in the cabinet is not as strong as previously. Mandelbaum would have been more careful if Aridor were in the same strong position he was a year ago, they added.

Bank officials said that Mandelbaum took his decision on Plessner after the series of declarations by Plessner about the bank and economic policy which had greatly embarrassed the bank and contradicted its official position.

EC resumes financial aid to Israel

BRUSSELS (AP). — The European Community has resumed financial aid to Israel totalling $36 million, it has been announced here.

The formal agreement to reinstate the aid which was suspended after last summer's invasion of Lebanon, was signed on Friday, EC officials said.

It came one week after EC government leaders at a meeting in Stuttgart agreed that financial assistance to Israel should be resumed under the same conditions that exist for other Mediterranean nations.

Under the agreement Israel can borrow up to $36m. until November, 1986, at below market rates through the European Investment Bank, the EC's long-term financing institution.

The money is to be used for construction projects, officials said.

Four attacks on IDF

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Israeli troops in Lebanon came under terrorist fire four times on Friday without suffering any casualties, the army spokesman reported.

The first attack came on Friday afternoon when terrorists fired two shells at an Israel Defence Forces position near Amik in the eastern sector. The shells fell near the position.

Early Friday evening, two RPG rockets were fired at soldiers manning a roadblock near the refinery at the Zaharani River south of Sidon. Fire was not returned.

A little later, a small IDF convoy was attacked with light arms near Jezzine. Also Friday evening, an IDF position near Khamed E-Luz came under light arms fire. In both cases fire was returned.

Meanwhile, Christian and Druse militiamen continued fighting in the Shouf mountains. On Friday night Phalangist forces blew up an empty Druse house in Bahamdoun, reportedly in reprisal for a similar Druse action.

Early yesterday, a Phalange tank fired into a house in Alei.

One man was killed yesterday morning in Sidon when a bomb went off in a shop. On Friday night, a car was blown up near Damour, apparently by a grenade.

Mapam narrowly votes to stay in Alignment

By SARAH HONIG
Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Once again, Mapam has failed to terminate the alignment with Labour, although this time it came closer than ever in its past.

By only 17 votes, the Mapam convention decided early yesterday afternoon to continue in the Alignment, with 515 voting to stay in the Alignment and 498 voting against it.

The close vote was a defeat for the party leadership, with all four secretaries — Victor Shemtov, Chalka Grossman, Gad Yatziv and Binyamin Yas'ur — sponsoring a resolution to replace the present Alignment by a much looser alliance, which would have meant separate Knesset factions for Labour and Mapam.

They were opposed by the party's two elder statesmen — Meir Ya'ari and Ya'acov Hazan — who once more proved their ability to sway party opinion against the odds. Labour leader Shimon Peres yesterday, at a meeting in Ben Shimon, expressed satisfaction over Mapam's decision.

The Labour mainstream heaved a sigh of relief after the break-up of the Alignment was averted. But Labour's outstanding dove, MK Yossi Sarid, voiced regret, saying that in view of the present situation in the Alignment it would have been better for Mapam to strike out on its own. The Alignment as it is cannot long continue, he predicted. Mapam secretary-general Victor Shemtov appeared to be the first casualty of the decision.

He announced that the defeat of his proposal to terminate the Alignment forces him to draw personal conclusions. He will not stand for the various top party offices when the new party forums are put together following the convention.

This could throw Mapam into a leadership struggle. Party leaders are now directing their energy to prevent a split within Mapam. Some of the party's left-wingers are so disenchanted with their failure to sever the link with Labour that they might unilaterally bolt the Alignment by splitting from Mapam. At the convention, Shemtov's argument for the dissolution of the Alignment was based on considerations of "politics, conscience and strategy." The main task he envisaged for socialists today was to topple the Begin government. He was appalled by the Labour Party decision to support the invasion of Lebanon. In Labour, Shemtov said, the Alignment was seen as "a corridor leading Mapam into a full-fledged merger with it." Shemtov said, "We want to be Labour's ally within a wide alliance of left-orientated parties."

If Mapam went on its own, said Shemtov, it had a chance to win the support of many people who feel

If those views are acceptable to Herut, he can come back, Kaufman believes. Six-year sentence for anti-Israel bombings

PARIS (JTA). — A self-confessed anti-Zionist activist has been sentenced to six years in prison by a Paris court for complicity in bomb attacks against firms linked with Israel.

Frederic Oriach, 29, a militant of the anti-Zionist Communist Revolutionary Group, denied having participated in the attacks. But the prosecution based its dossier on the fact that Oriach had written anti-Zionist leaflets and that a list of 38 firms listed had been the target of bomb attacks.

Kotlowitz to stay in post four months

By JUDY SIEGEL

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Jewish Agency aliyah department chairman Raphael Kotlowitz, who was supposed to lose his job last week, was given a four-month extension after a committee failed to reach agreement on a successor.

The Diaspora members of the agency board of governors had tried during last week's assembly to topple Kotlowitz, a Herut loyalist who has been in the post for over five years. They used their veto power, arguing that Kotlowitz was unable to communicate with Diaspora communities and that he had packed his department with party cronies.

But the Jewish Agency Executive, which convened on Friday, was able to bypass the Diaspora board members, at least temporarily. Meanwhile, Uri Gordon, of the Labour Zionists, was appointed to head the Youth Aliyah department, by previous agreement among the parties. Tomorrow, the Zionist Executive will confirm the new chairman of the information department, Labour's Uzi Narkiss, and extend the terms of other department chairmen who have served for the last five years.

But Kotlowitz, whose chairmanship is dependent upon Diaspora approval, will continue until the agency board meets in October. The Diaspora board members, angry over Herut's attempts to neutralize their veto power, are certain to demand Kotlowitz's dismissal. Prime Minister Menachem Begin boycotted the closing session of the assembly Thursday night because the Diaspora board vetoed Kotlowitz, as well as another Herut man, Eli Tavin, for the aliyah job.

Although government sources have said that the cabinet will accept whatever the prime minister proposes, Cabinet secretary Dan Meridor announced on Friday afternoon that the government was in favour of agreed arbitration to settle the dispute.

Begin, apparently highly concerned about the crisis brewing in the coalition and by reports of patients being shunted from hospital to hospital, pressed Aridor to accept.

Aridor has consistently maintained that if the conduct of the doctors' wage talks is removed from his hands, he will be forced to resign. He would consider such a step a clear sign of no confidence in his policies.

Sources close to Aridor said last night that the finance minister would be able "to live with" an arbitration agreement only if all topics were thrown open for discussion. If the cabinet should decide on conditions for arbitration that are "too close" to the doctors' demands, it is likely that Aridor will "draw his own conclusions," the sources said.

The collapse of the negotiations on Friday morning came as a "bombshell" to the employers, it was learned. The two sides had come "very close" to agreement after a day of talks at the Savoyon home of Health Ministry Director-General Prof. Baruch Modan's senior aid.

The two sides had agreed to a basic wage scale, to the inclusion of certain supplements currently paid to the doctors in the new wage scale and to a special supplement for residents amounting to 10 per cent. They also agreed that one of the main sticking-points — the shortening of the work week — would be turned over to an arbitrator and agreed in principle that the new gains would be spread over a period of two to three years, it was learned, stating that they hang on to an agreement that they made in their 1976 wage agreements. The Treasury wants to cut this pay rate to bring down the total cost of the new wage agreement.

Macabee Dean adds:
Before last night's crucial meeting with heads of hospital committees from all over the country, IMA chairman Dr. Ram Ishai said: "The Israel Medical Association is willing to call off the strike the moment the cabinet signs an arbitration agreement."

"We have had contact with the employers throughout all of Friday and Saturday but nothing has moved. We are still stalemated and arbitration seems the only way out," he told The Post.

Ishai then entered the board room of the IMA to address about 100 doctors in a closed meeting. About half the doctors were wearing hunger strike badges. Ishai and the other doctors named several preconditions to arbitration. Firstly, the arbitrator must be a well-known and respected personality acceptable to both sides. Secondly, the arbitrator must hand down his conclusions within 40 days, and these would be binding on both sides, with implementation to begin immediately.

Thirdly, the arbitrator's terms of reference would not include any issue, i.e. the promised pay hikes, already settled between the doctors and the Finance Ministry.

Fourthly, all pay hikes and other benefits would be retroactive through April 1982, the date on which the present wage agreement expired.

Fifthly, the starting wage of all new doctors would be equal to the average wage in Israel. Sixthly, the doctor's work week must be only 36 hours, and not the current 45 hours, with anything above 36 hours considered overtime.

And finally, no pay or work conditions included in past agreements would be reduced, that is to say, doctors who now earn most of their monthly wage as overtime would not have their overtime pay docked to increase their basic wage.

The arbitrator would deal mainly with the question of specific pay hikes in certain fields and in certain types of work.

FBI to probe shooting of Yeshiva University students

By LEON HADAR

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

NEW YORK. — The Reagan administration has asked the FBI to investigate the wounding of three yeshiva students by a gunman spraying automatic rifle fire into a Jewish cafe.

The FBI announcement came yesterday after a powerful firecracker blew out an Upper Manhattan synagogue window. Police Friday night seized a 14-year-old boy for allegedly placing the firecracker and said the incident was not related to the shooting.

Wednesday's shooting, near Yeshiva University, was the third incident in two weeks in Washington Heights in which Jews or Jewish institutions were fired upon. No one was injured in the other two incidents.

Ken Walton, assistant director of the FBI in New York said his agents will conduct preliminary investigation. In Washington, assistant attorney-general William Bradford Reynolds explained that the inquiry was requested to determine whether the incidents represent a potential violation of federal criminal civil rights statutes. The inquiry had been requested by the Metropolitan Council of the American Jewish Congress.

On Thursday Mayor Ed Koch announced a $10,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of those responsible for Wednesday's shooting. The mayor met with the heads of Yeshiva University and promised to strengthen its police protection.

Representatives of the Jewish and Hispanic communities, together with representatives of the police department, other ethnic and religious groups and civic leaders met in the headquarters of the American Jewish Committee in New York and promised to fight the "new wave of anti-Semitic terrorism."

Police sources in New York said there is a possibility that the shootings are related to labour unrest in the Yeshiva University's offices. Another possibility they say is that it is the work of an Hispanic gang.

The chairman of the U.S. humanities agency, William Bennett, said he agreed with the league and called the film "a mawkish political tract" that "we have no business funding."

The 26-minute film, Women Under

Siege, is one of three about changes in the political, religious and economic status of women in the Middle East. It was produced for use in school by Elizabeth Farnes, a lecturer in Middle Eastern studies and English at the University of Texas in Austin.

Farnes said the allegation that her film is PLO propaganda was ridiculous.

"It presents Palestinian women as real people, not as enemies, and perhaps that's the problem," she said.

Austria to continue Kreisky's M.E. policy

VIENNA (AP). — Austrian Chancellor Fred Sinowatz, in his first public comments on the Middle East, reportedly pledged to follow most of former chancellor Bruno Kreisky's often controversial policies for the region.

He also indicated, in excerpts of an interview published Friday, that Austria will continue contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization even if PLO rebels succeed in toppling Yasser Arafat, the organization's embattled leader.

"There will be a maximum of continuity...in the Middle East question," Sinowatz was quoted as saying. The interview was to appear in full in yesterday's Arbeiter Zeitung, the socialist party daily.

"The PLO is generally recognized by the Palestinians as their representative, so that I must speak with them," he reportedly said. "Israel, like right to borders. But also have to be fulfilled."

Hans van den Broek, particularly in view of the recent cooling of relations between Israel and the Netherlands.

Are missing children in Israel?

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

LONDON. — Mystery surrounds the whereabouts of two young children who vanished from outside a northwest London Jewish day-school on Wednesday.

Frankie Raymond, father of the children, said on Friday that he had received a telephone call early in the morning from his wife Margaret, from whom he is seeking a divorce and whom he believes is responsible for the disappearance of David and Sarah. She claimed that she was speaking from Israel and that the children were with her. But because she refused to let him speak to them, Raymond said he did not believe her.

Nevertheless, Raymond appealed to anyone in Israel with information about his children to contact him. "All I want to do is talk to them, and know that they are safe," he said. "I am not interested in trying to get them back to London. The best place for them at present is with their mother."

Singapore paper apologizes for anti-Jewish ad

NEW YORK (JTA). — A Singapore newspaper has apologized to the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith for publishing an advertisement for pianos that contained an anti-Semitic slur.

The ad, placed in The Straits Times by the Chiu piano firm for a sale it was having, was captioned:

"Now, British and German pianos at Jewish prices."

In response to an ADL complaint, an executive of the paper said the ad "would not have been accepted had it not slipped through our normal standards check. Our newspaper does not subscribe to nor allow advertisements of this nature."

Netanya romp

Post Sports Staff
There were mixed fortunes for the two Israeli clubs involved in this year's Intertoto summer soccer competition. League champions Maccabi Netanya crushed F.C. Lucerne of Switzerland 6-3 but runners-up Shimshon Tel Aviv were bested 2-1 by the Copenhagen side Arhus.

The 1,500 loyal Netanya fans were entertained to a real goal romp even though the Israeli champions were even without the magical scoring powers of striker Oded Machness.

Benny Lamm and David Lavi capitalized on an own-goal which had brought Netanya level after Henter had sent the Swiss into an early lead. Both sharp-shooting Netanya men grabbed second goals in the latter half and Halton got the final round of the Netanya half-dozen. Chaff and Rizer got the visitors consolation goals.

A good crowd of over 3,000 took advantage of the free entry offer at the National Stadium at Ramat Gan but watched Shimshon rather than Netanya rather than the Danish opponents. Arhus have won their Intertoto division during both previous seasons and it was easy to see why as they dominated the match throughout.

Ben Shitrit had a chance to cancel out the advantage of an early Christianson goal but he squandered his penalty attempt. He was not given another opportunity when a second penalty fell Shimshon's way in the second half.

Captain Gideon Dami gave no quarter and he shot home truly to make it 1-1. But 10 minutes before the final whistle Jansen, who had come on as substitute, struck home a fierce drive to give the Danes a deserved victory.

WIMBLEDON

Kathy quashes Chris' Grand Slam dream

Post Sports Staff and Agencies
The way is now open for Martina Navratilova to record her second successive Wimbledon tennis triumph as she cruised into the last 16 with an imposing 40-minute display yesterday crushing the hapless Yugoslav Mima Jausvec 6-2, 6-1.

Martina's task was made dramatically easier after the astounding result of the tournament on Friday when Chris Evert Lloyd was bounced out by fellow American Kathy Jordan, who had never before taken a set off Lloyd but won convincingly 6-1, 7-6.

All three top men players, Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe, and Ivan Lendl, seem in devastating form and powered their way through to the last 16 of the men's singles.

But it was the Lloyd defeat which captured the great interest, for an era came to a close on the famed grass courts — punctuated by the rocket serves of Kathy Jordan.

For an amazing 12 years, a total of 34 Grand Slam events — on grass, on clay, on cement — Chris Evert Lloyd had reached the semifinals.

"It hasn't sunk in yet that I have beaten her," the tough-minded Jordan said after disposing of the three-time Wimbledon winner 6-1, 7-6. "But I went out there with great determination and a good attitude, so I knew I would play well."

Lloyd, in fact, "went out there" feeling ill. She had summoned a tournament doctor to her London home in the middle of the night because of persistent vomiting. But tournament officials said she did not ask for her match against Jordan to be postponed.

"I don't want to make any excuses," Lloyd said graciously after the defeat. "Kathy played great tennis and I got her on an 'on' day while I was off."

An ebullient Jordan said she didn't know what to do — whether to laugh or cry — after upsetting Lloyd. "I was happy I won," said the hard-hitting, 23-year-old political science student. "But I can't say I'm glad about spoiling her Grand Slam. The Grand Slam doesn't matter. Chris is a great champion. She will continue to be a great champion."

The defeat shattered Evert Lloyd's hope of adding Wimbledon to her list of Grand Slam titles. She has won one of the most devastating services in women's tennis — very powerful and usually well angled. But she seems to take stance, bouncing the ball eight times and then leaning almost to the ground. A John McEnroe, before unleashing the blast, Lloyd seemed to find the slow process a little unsettling. "Yes, I count the bounces," Jordan said. "It's just something I cultivated." Jordan served five clean aces.

Carling Bassett, 15-year-old Canadian prodigy, staged another upset. She played on the famed centre court for the first time and drummed out 17-year-old Andrea Temesvari of Rumania, the 14th seed.

Jordan now meets 15th-seeded American Kathy Rinaldi, who won her third-round match 6-0, 6-7, 6-4 against compatriot Betsy Nagelsen, for a place in the quarter-finals. The winner of the Jordan-Rinaldi match will meet either Billie Jean King of the U.S. or Australia's Wendy Turnbull, both veterans.

TWO OF THIS YEAR'S WIMBLEDON UPSTARTS — Kathy Jordan who demolished Chris Evert Lloyd, and Nigeria's Ndaka Odizor who has stormed into the last 16, his victims including fourth-seeded Guillermo Vilas.

King, 39, the 10th seed, beat her compatriot and long-time friend Rosie Casals 6-3, 6-4. The pair first played each other at Wimbledon in a semifinal in 1969 when King also won in straight sets.

Jimmy Connors, defending his men's title, eliminated Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden 6-1, 7-6, 6-2 to reach the last 16. Connors was a move ahead of his 19-year-old rival for most of the match. But Sundstrom, one of a rich crop of young Swedish players who have followed in the wake of Bjorn Borg, had two set points in the tiebreaker of the second set.

Sundstrom thought he had won the second of them with an ace. But the ball was ruled out on a hairline decision and Connors resumed his march to victory.

John McEnroe calmly and methodically carved up Brad Gilbert to move also into the fourth round. McEnroe, minus the temper tantrums and arguments that had marred his earlier matches, was completely in control in his centre court battle with Gilbert, a strong-serving right-hander.

Yesterday's major upsets were the eliminating among the women of Sylvia Hanika, sixth-seeded, by South Africa's Jennifer Mundell, the exit of British hope Jo Durie to Eva Pfaff of West Germany and the march onward of the veteran Virginia Wade at the expense of Andrea Leand of the U.S., the last Maccabiah Games champion.

Roscoe Tanner, a great former finalist during the Borg era, scored a wonderful win over fifth-seeded Mats Wilander, while Johan Kriek went out in noisy fashion. Kriek was beaten by a former U.S. Collegiate champion Robert Van't Hof in three straight sets and then had an unusual complaint. The food at Wimbledon was so rotten he hadn't had a decent meal all week, he said. He also protested that the grass was worn thin and that made the bounce unpredictable. To make matters worse for the South African-born Kriek in a later doubles match he slipped and twisted an ankle and had to withdraw.

The 18-year-old Australian Pat Cash continued his storming progress by routing Ricardo Acuna of Chile 6-3, 6-4 and preserving his record of not having dropped a set.

Ndaka Odizor, the Nigerian who has captured the hearts of the Wimbledon public, said he would use the weekend "to unwind and go to church." Odizor, a 24-year-old Nigerian ranked 82 in the world, says his religious faith has been the principal inspiration behind his unexpected progress in the tournament. He beat Frenchman Loic Courteau in five sets.

into high gear

Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Israel's preparations for next month's crucial Davis Cup zone "A" semi-final tennis tie against the strong West German team at Ramat Hasharon move into top gear today, following Shlomo Glickstein's return home from Wimbledon. Glickstein decided not to compete in the doubles competition there, so that he could practise with the rest of the national squad for the July 7-9 match against the Germans at the Israel Tennis Centre's "Canada Stadium."

Glickstein, Shahar Perkin and David Schneider, who took Israel to the great 4-1 quarter-final victory over Monaco a fortnight ago, are being joined in the warm-up programme by Yair Wertheimer and Eilon Sinai.

Israel and West Germany have met only once before in the Davis Cup, with the Germans squeezing home 3-2 in indoor competition at Augsburg in 1979. Glickstein, who has now won 15 of his 23 Davis Cup singles outings to date, will be the only survivor from that earlier encounter.

The German team for the Ramat Hasharon tie consists of Dami Keretic and Michael Westphal in singles and Wolfgang Popp and Andreas Maurer in doubles. Though Glickstein's current ATP world singles ranking of 32nd is far higher than either Keretic (86th in the standings) or Westphal (172nd) the Israeli star has lost two of his three matches to date against the former and been beaten in his only contest against Westphal.

If Israel can defeat Germany — the success of which is in question — they will be at home again in the quarter-final against either Holland or Switzerland. The winners are guaranteed to the 16-nation Davis Cup grand division in 1984.

WORLD CUP

Indian rhapsody as Windies humbled

Post Sports Staff

To the rapturous delight of their supporters who invaded the pitch after their triumph, India scored an astounding win to capture the World Cricket Cup away from the West Indies, defeating the two-time champions in gripping fashion by 43 runs at Lord's Cricket Ground in London yesterday.

India, the surprise packet of the World Cup series — having earlier disposed of both Australia and England — fought back like wounded tigers after being dismissed for a seemingly paltry 183.

Clive Lloyd, making possibly his final appearance as West Indian captain, suffered a series of shocks to his hopes of a third straight win as his side lost 5 wickets for 66 by the 19th over — Madan Lal taking three of them in an 18 ball spell.

Lloyd was one of those to go. After hurting a leg completing his first single he had to have a runner for the remainder of his short innings — ended when Kapil Dev caught him off Roger Binny.

It was one of the greatest upsets in cricket history when India, the 40-1 outsiders beat the hot favourites.

It all went wrong for Lloyd and his perhaps over-confident team after Viv Richards was third out at 57. He had hit an imperious 33 that contained seven fours. Then Indian captain Kapil Dev brilliantly caught Richards, a spectacular running catch at mid-wicket to provide Madan Lal with the second of three crucial wickets he took in an 18-ball spell.

Earlier after recovering from the quick loss of the former captain and opener Suresh Gavaskar, India withstood the early fire of the West Indian fast bowlers to reach 90 for 2 (Srikkanth 38, Amarnath 26). But just when it appeared that the batsman would set a big target, India suffered a disastrous spell either side of the lunch break.

After 30 overs West Indies were 86 for 6 with Dujon and Marshall slowly accumulating previous runs. The wildly-enthusiastic supporters of both teams were edging onto the playing area from the packed stands, and play halted briefly as stewards and police pushed them back. After 32 overs the tally had risen to 95, including a fine sixer from Dujon.

The score was 119 for 7 off 41 overs when Dujon was bowled by Amarnath for 25, and it was still anyone's game as the West Indians grabbed at every possible single. Indian hopes soared as Marshall was caught by Gavaskar off Amarnath for 18 and then Kapil Dev had Roberts LBW for 4. It remained with Joel Garner and holding to save the West Indies — on 129 for nine.

The tail-enders couldn't, however, pluck the devastated innings out of the ruins and the West Indies were dismissed for 140 when Holding was LBW to Amarnath in the 52nd over.

Amarnath was named Man-of-the-Match for his bowling of 3 for 12 in seven overs and his innings of 26.

Thousands of fans without tickets brought traffic chaos to the roads around Lord's as they tried in vain to get into the match. All 21,000 tickets for the match were sold months ago and touts around the ground were asking £140 for tickets.

Said a disappointed West Indian supporter, who had waited outside since 4 a.m., "I've got more chance of being selected to play for the West Indies than I have of watching them today."

RAMAT GAN. — The Jerusalem Post Bowls Cup for the best team playing in the Max Spitz Charities Day competition was won yesterday by Edith Cohen-Mintz, Solly Harris, Abe Joffe and Max Shoffman.

Over 250 bowlers participated in the tournament which was organized at all the country's six lawn bowls clubs — Ramat Gan, Sa-yon, Netanya (Wingate Institute), Ra'anana, Caesarea and Kfar Hamaccabiah.

One of the most pleasant days in the history of Israeli bowls was rounded up with a reception organized by the Ladies' Committee of the Ramat Gan club. During this reception, cheques for $130,000 each in favour of the Jerusalem Post Toy Fund and the Jerusalem Post Forsake-Me-Not Fund were handed over by Men's Bowling Association President, Philip Glickstein to third beneficiary of the Charities Day, the Soldiers Welfare Association.

Gillon presented the Jerusalem Post floating trophy, as well as individual cups, to the winning team. The competition was arranged on a mixed flying links basis. This was the second occasion on which the annual event was organized.

The Max Spitz Charities Day will take place every June in future, inaugurating a new season.

Maccabi seeking better deal

By PAUL KOHN
Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The 32nd Israel Maccabi Convention that opens at Kfar Hamaccabiah on Thursday will hear persistent demands for stronger Maccabi representation on the country's main sports bodies.

"Maccabi has had unprecedented achievements in sports in the past year, and we believe achievement in top class sports competition should have greater bearing than simply numbers of membership," Yitzhak Caspi, Chairman of Israel Maccabi, told a press conference this week. Maccabi teams won the First Division soccer and basketball leagues, the basketball cups for men and women, the cup in handball, the national championship in weightlifting, tennis and badminton. Many of the nation's top athletes in many sports are Maccabi stars.

Maccabi leaders pointed out that the sports organization had undertaken an extensive expansion programme in development areas and also among the minorities.

Yitzhak Hameiri accused the Government and Jewish Agency of "not helping in the aliyah of athletes from Anglo-Saxon countries who want to settle here." He refused to divulge specifics. Caspi came out strongly against the first Elitzuria, the religious sports gathering planned here for this summer. Earlier, Zeev Braverman, secretary of Elitzur, said thousands of young people would come here from all parts of the world for sports competitions and folklore for the Elitzuria, which opens on July 27 in Caesarea, under the patronage of Education Minister Zviulun Hammer. It will end at the Western Wall in Jerusalem two weeks later. The Elitzuria will cost $1m., Braverman said.

Could explode in softball finale

TEL AVIV. — The Israel softball league concluded the regular season schedule yesterday, with a double-header at the Hebrew University's Givat Ram campus. Maccabi Gould of Tel Aviv defeated Jerusalem's Anglican School. They edged the first game 17-16, and then exploded for a 36-14 victory over their hosts.

The U.S. Embassy and Western Galilee teams will be relegated to the "B" League next season, while Maccabi Gould will compete in the "A" league next spring. Playoffs begin next week with Lavi Kitch leading Beita Beita Club at 12.00 at Ramat Fakhel and Maccabi Tel Aviv facing Anshel Mink at the Tel Aviv Sports. In the "B" league, playoffs, Maccabi Gould, the Arava Golan, Kibbutz Golan and Kibbutz Galon begin play at 10 a.m. in Tel Aviv.

Carlton ahead in battle for pitching hegemony

NEW YORK (AP). — Steve Carlton moved ahead of Nolan Ryan in their duel for baseball's all-time strikeout record, pitching the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-3 victory on Friday night over the New York Mets.

Carlton struck out six batters in eight innings, giving him 3,551 in his career. Ryan, who broke Walter Johnson's record last April, has 3,548. Since Ryan broke the mark, the strikeout lead has changed hands three times.

In other National League action, Atlanta swept a double-header at Cincinnati, coming within one out of getting two shutouts. Craig McMurtry pitched a three-hitter to win the opener 3-0, and Ken Dayley had a five-hitter going until Cincinnati scored five runs with two out in the ninth inning of the nightcap before succumbing 10-5. Atlanta scored five runs in the top of the ninth of the second game, two on a double by Biff Pocoroba, who had four RBIs, Glenn Hubbard homered for Atlanta in the opener.

Jim Morrison hit a two-run double and one of three homers in the seventh inning for Pittsburgh as the Pirates won their seventh straight with an 8-2 victory over St. Louis. Bill Madlock and Brian Harper also homered in the Pirates' seventh, and Lee Lacy hit a two-run homer for Pittsburgh in the third as Jim Bibbey recorded his first victory as a starter since September 22, 1981.

In the American League, Don Sutton held Cleveland hitless for six innings, winding up with a three-hitter as the Brewers beat the Indians 6-2. Sutton struck out eight batters, giving him 3,001 lifetime. Cecil Cooper homered and drove in three Milwaukee runs.
